LIQUOR MONEY FOR JUBILEE MAY BE LESS

Part of Hospital Money May Go to St. Joseph's
The Jubilee Hospital's share of the sale of liquor in British Columbia may be cut almost in half by the decision of the St. Joseph's Hospital authorities to seek a portion of the city's liquor money. Developments in Vancouver, where St. Paul's Hospital is asking for a share of the city's liquor money, seem to indicate that Victoria may be prepared to share its liquor money between hospital institutions, which may prove a just claim.
St. Paul's Hospital in Vancouver is demanding a share of the Liquor Board profits hitherto paid out by the city exclusively to the Vancouver General Hospital.
E. C. Meyers, as counsel for St. Paul's, recently wrote Hon. John Hart, Minister of Finance, asking that no more money be paid the city of Vancouver on this account until back payments had been made by the city to St. Paul's Hospital. He further asked that in future the city be instructed to pay a full share of the proceeds to his client.
In reply, the Minister of Finance wrote that the Provincial Government had no power to stop payment of these profits and referred him to the City Council as to their allocation.

What Act Says
Section 108 of the Liquor Control Act under which Mr. Meyers is claiming a share for St. Paul's Hospital, reads as follows:
The net profits remaining from time to time after providing the sums required for purposes of the reserve fund shall be disposed of as follows:
(a) One-half of the net amount shall be apportioned and paid to the several municipalities in the Province in proportion to their respective population, and of all moneys so paid to each municipality one-half thereof shall be placed to the credit of a special account in the municipal treasury, and shall be paid thereout only for maintaining or granting aid to hospitals in that municipality, or for such other purposes of municipal expenditure as may be approved by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council.

EXPERT ADVICE ON RADIO

TO MAKE A SIMPLE VARIO COUPLER
In many ways a vario-coupler is a more efficient and satisfactory form of loose-coupled inductance than the ordinary loose-coupled coil, and it is even simpler and easier to construct. To construct the vario coupler shown in the accompanying drawing you will require a stator or outer tube about four and one-half inches in diameter; five to five and one-half inches in length. A brass rotor tube of the right diameter and length to revolve freely within the outer tube without touching anywhere, after allowing space for the wire winding. A piece of wood for a base and the necessary wiring. A brass rod one-quarter of an inch in diameter and about six inches long. A knob, six binding posts. A six-point switch. A piece of wood for a base and the necessary wiring. Commence winding the other tube by threading one end of the No. 26 wire through a hole about half an inch from the tube end, as shown in the cut, and wind on the wire, keeping the turns close together, but not touching, and take three taps at about every ten turns, beginning with the first turn, fasten the wire with a drop of sealing wax, bring it across diagonally, leaving a bare space half an inch wide on the tube and go on winding for thirty turns more, taking three more taps as illustrated in the figure at A. Finish by running the wire through another hole half an inch from the end of the tube and fasten with sealing wax, leaving about eight inches of loose wire free. Winding the inner coil or rotor is simpler because on taps are taken. Use No. 26 wire. Start exactly at already described and wind on twenty-five turns for the "tickle", running the end of the wire through a hole and leaving six or eight inches of free end. The other end of the tube, wind on forty-two turns of No. 20 wire for the secondary (Fig. C) also leaving free ends to the wire. Now bore one-quarter inch holes eight per cent. of the total iron and steel issues from Bombay. On top of this comes another interesting issue of £2,000,000 Royal Steam Packet preferred stock, offered at par and bringing interest at 6 1/2 per cent.

LATE PERSONALS.

Mr. Chris. Spencer is in the city to-day from Vancouver.
Mrs. Reginald Hayward and her three boys, together with Miss Maycock, are staying at Shawmissan at Mr. Fox's Summer cottage.
A couple had just been married. The clergyman shook hands with the bride and then held out his hand to the bridegroom. The latter, however, took no notice, but stood with his hand deep in his trousers pocket. When he saw that the clergyman continued to hold his hand out, he said in a very annoyed tone, "Hang it all, can't you see I'm getting the money out as fast as I can?"—Tit-Bits.

Who Pays For Advertising?

THIS is a direct and reasonable question; and in the case of Daily Newspaper advertising, intelligently used, the answer is simple: Nobody. It pays its own way.
Nobody pays for the new carburetor that gives added mileage to your motor car. It pays for itself in the gasoline it saves.
Nobody pays for an improved cash system in a modern department store. It pays for itself in economy of human time.
Nobody pays for well planned and written Daily Newspaper advertising. It pays for itself by reducing the cost of sales and by increasing production. And it often receipts old bills for follies with advertising labels.

LIQUOR MONEY FOR JUBILEE MAY BE LESS

Part of Hospital Money May Go to St. Joseph's
By kind invitation of Mrs. W. J. Watson, provincial standard bearer, and regent of the Sister Agnes Keyser Chapter, a representative gathering of members and officers of the primary Chapters on Y. I., from Nanaimo to Cowichan, was held on Wednesday at Mrs. Watson's residence.
The chapters represented were: First officers and members of the Bastion Chapter, Nanaimo; 3 from Ladysmith; all of the Porter Chapter, Saltair; all the members of the Sister Agnes Keyser Chapter, Chemainus and Portofino; members and officers of the Cowichan Chapter. Much regret was felt that none of the Sir Clive Phillips-Wolley Chapter were able to be present.
The meeting was opened by singing "God Save the King," all standing at attention with the standard bearer, Mrs. Griesbach, holding the Sister Agnes Keyser banner. The prayer followed by the I. O. D. E. prayer recited in unison, Miss Dobson, regent, followed by Mrs. Spencer, secretary of the Bastion Chapter, Nanaimo, kindly read special reports of the meeting of the National Chapter, held in Vancouver. These papers were much appreciated by all present, especially the report of the reports of the meeting of the National Chapter, held in Vancouver.
Mrs. Primrose Wells, of Duncan, spoke a few words about the National meeting and about I. O. D. E. work in general. Mrs. Primrose Wells pointed out the benefit derived from meeting together and working together in harmony, emphasizing the fact that nothing can be done without unity.
Mrs. Martindale, Provincial Echoes Secretary, spoke a few well-chosen words on Education, and invited reports to subscribe. She pointed out the necessity of taking in and reading the official paper of the I. O. D. E.

Reports Speak
After the reports the regents were asked to speak. Mrs. Christmas, Cowichan Chapter; Mrs. Coill, Ladysmith Chapter; Mrs. Southin, Porter Chapter, responded, all said how much they had enjoyed the privilege of listening to the splendid papers given by Miss Dobson and Mrs. Spencer and the inspiring remarks of Mrs. Primrose Wells and Mrs. Martindale, and all hoped that this was only the beginning of such meetings. A hearty vote of thanks was given to the ladies who had read papers.
Later tea was served on the lawn gaily decorated with flags. Those present were Mrs. F. W. Howay, of New Westminster and Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. Griesbach from Chemainus. They were assisted by Mesdames Donald Dunn, E. M. Ansell, J. Smith, Loybese, Stubbs and James Chemainus; Lewis and Martingale from Nanaimo; Gibbs from Duncan; and Undine Howay from New Westminster and Miss Agnes Keyser, secretary of the Porter Chapter.

PAPERS IN IRISH FREE STATE ARE SEVERELY CENSORED

Dublin, July 15.—An indication of the severity of the censorship now in force in the Irish Free State capital is furnished by the current issue of The Voice of Labor, official newspaper of the Irish Transport Workers' Union, which appears with thirteen blank columns out of a total of thirty-two.
An editorial note explains that in view of the censorship the paper is unable to express labor's full views on anything touching the military or political situation.

Premier Norris did not break any new ground. ATTACK ON CRAIG.

Col. Sullivan said the Progressive Party was founded on the personal ambition of Mr. Craig. He declared that although Mr. Craig had been befriended by Sir Rodmond Roblin, former Premier, and appointed crown prosecutor, he had turned against his benefactor, accepted a brief from the Government which succeeded Roblin to prosecute members of the former administration and received $25,000 for it. Now he had turned against the Norris Government and sought to wreck it.

LONDON EXCHANGE HAS QUIET PERIOD

London, July 15.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Further reduction in the rate of discount by the Bank of England this week to three per cent. has failed to bring any extension of business in the stock market here. Trade on the London Exchange is keeping steady without any important movement, with the exception of a slight reaction in British government issues. Depositors of the ultra cautious school who have been keeping their money in the banks at 1 1/2 per cent. hardly will be induced to look around for something more profitable until the late summer months, when things are improving. OLD FRIENDS
The peculiarities of the Hibernian temperament were quaintly illustrated by an incident which occurred once in the O.P. Club. Hearing a disturbance in the lobby, an Englishman rushed there, to discover a man lying on the floor, his head being periodically and violently bumped by an Irish opponent on top of him.
"What are you doing?" questioned the astonished beholder.
"Don't you interfere," exclaimed the Irishman, giving the head another bump. "This is an old bosom friend of mine."—Tit-Bits.

As the omnibus passed the city insurance office on its third or fourth journey of the day, one could see through the window the care with which one of the male staff was helping a lady colleague through her work.
But there was a cynical passenger on top who had evidently passed that way earlier.
"lumme!" he remarked, "he was 'olping' er with 'er sums at eleven this morning. Ain't 'e finished yet?"—Tit-Bits.

DR. SHORTT'S REPORT

It may not be possible for the City of Victoria to inaugurate all the reforms that are advocated in the report which has just been submitted to the Municipal Council by Dr. Adam Shortt.

Some of the more outstanding recommendations contained in the report were foreshadowed by Dr. Shortt on the occasion of his public utterances when he was in the city some time ago.

A municipal income tax will be of especial interest to every citizen and will undoubtedly provoke more than ordinary controversy.

The report contains many drastic suggestions, but Dr. Shortt recognizes in the masterful diagnosis which he has conducted that unless drastic remedies shall be applied our municipal affairs will drift into a state of chaos.

Those who were responsible for the suggestion that Dr. Shortt should conduct an examination of civic problems cannot fail to be satisfied with the result of their public spirited efforts.

THAT TWO CENT DUTY.

While it is true that the Canadian Government passed an Order-in-Council last May providing that American fishing vessels may purchase their bait and supplies in this Province as long as they undertake to land their catches at our ports, there is nothing in its provisions which in any way differs from the arrangements that have been in existence and understood by both countries for twelve years.

The fly in the ointment is the suggestion that the United States Senate will place a duty of two cents per pound on all fish caught by American vessels and shipped in bond through a foreign port.

News from London indicates that the Dominion Government has dropped the hint to the Hon. P. C. Larkin that he had better look for new quarters in a building other than that owned by this Province.

Those who have followed the various moves in the fishing business on this coast see in the Senate's proposal the fruits of a campaign which originated in Ketchikan years ago when strenuous efforts were made to compel the American halibut fleet to land all its fish at that point. The Seattle Association complains because the two cent tariff would send the business to the American port at the expense of Prince Rupert and Seattle.

Our sympathies would naturally swing towards Prince Rupert and Seattle; but it is highly possible that the tariffites at Washington will realize the unpopularity of this latest move as quickly as they have recognized the poor politics which some other new tariff proposals represent.

VISION WANTED.

Several members of the Chamber of Commerce will turn landscape gardeners this afternoon and put in some necessary work around the trees on Memorial Avenue.

BLUNDERING ON.

There is every indication that Eamonn de Valera is going to follow the course which has been set by so many political blunders. He is doing his best to make the people loathe him and all his works.

TOO PUBLIC.

Pictures appearing in one of the Vancouver newspapers depict the cremation of a young Hindu in accordance with ancient burial ceremonial. But it would appear that little has been done to add the least degree of privacy to these last and sacred rites.

THE IDEA DROPPED.

News from London indicates that the Dominion Government has dropped the hint to the Hon. P. C. Larkin that he had better look for new quarters in a building other than that owned by this Province.

promising investment in more ways than one the issue that has been much in the public mind of late would take on a different aspect. In the meantime if the Dominion Government should fail to obtain suitable premises for the High Commissioner it could still make terms with those leaseholders who use parts of the building not required by the administrative and exhibition sections of our own agency and become the tenant of the Province.

THE CASE OF MOHANI.

It may be a small incident in itself, but there would appear to be something wrong with the course of justice which permits a judge to sentence an accused person in the face of an unanimous verdict of not guilty from the jury.

To be an advocate of armed revolt in that part of the Empire and to make it known in the market place is a serious matter and is usually punished. The gentle zephyrs which float over Hyde Park absorb similar vapors every Sunday afternoon and the nearby policeman merely smiles and lets the orator get it off his chest.

NOTE AND COMMENT

In the Ontario town of Port Dalhousie there was neither a birth, a death, nor a marriage during the month of June.

Six months ago a young Montreuil of fourteen Summers stole his first gun and faced the Judge of the Juvenile Court. Yesterday found him once more arraigned, this time for having stolen a revolver to hold up a store.

Members of the Vancouver Automobile Association are intending to go over the uncompleted link of the Hope-Princeton section of the proposed trans-Provincial Highway on horseback in a few days' time.

MRS. MACLACHLAN VISITS INTERIOR

Women's Institutes Do Useful Welfare Work

Mrs. V. S. MacLachlan, Secretary of the Provincial Women's Institutes, under the Department of Agriculture, returned this morning from a month's visit to the Interior. At Kelowna, the first point to be visited, a conference was held on June 21 and 22, attended by delegates from the other Okanagan centres. Of especial interest was a discussion on the valuable work of the school nurse at Vernon. Appointed through the efforts of the Vernon W. I. in October last, the report of her work up to June showed the following results: Of 291 children suffering from defective teeth 269 received treatment; of 45 children suffering from enlarged tonsils 34 received treatment. A case of defective eyesight was fitted for the necessary glasses, and a case of incipient tuberculosis detected in a little child under ten years of age was met by a special course of preventive treatment consisting of rest, food and sleep in the open air, and after six weeks of this regime showed decided improvement.

Social & Personal

Miss Butler, of Winnipeg, is visiting in Victoria as the guest of Miss Bradley at Devonshire House. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Kilpatrick have left for Vancouver, where they will make their future home. Mrs. Reginald Hayward and family are spending the summer months at their cottage at Shawnigan Lake. Mrs. J. W. Spencer, Jean Crescent, entertained at the dinner hour on Wednesday evening, covers being laid for twelve. Mr. W. M. Reynolds, British Consul at Honolulu, and Mrs. Reynolds, with nurse and two children, are guests at Cherrybank. Miss Eileen Lawrence, after several months' holiday spent in the Interior of the Province, has returned to her home on Island Road. The many friends of Mr. Griffith, of Angus Campbell & Co., will regret to hear he has received word of the death of his father in Toronto. Mrs. (Dr.) Washington, of Vancouver, with her sister, Miss McLennan, and Miss Davis, of Regina, have been recent visitors to Butchart's Gardens. Mrs. Horace Oldfield, of Prospect Lake, with her three children, are the guests for a few weeks of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Percy James, Monterey Avenue. Mrs. Hole, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Elsie Hole, of the glove department of Amsh Campbell & Co., has left for a three months' holiday to be spent in England. A meeting of the West Saanich Women's Institute will be held in the Institute rooms at Suggs on Tuesday, July 18, at 2.30. All members are requested to attend promptly at that hour. Miss Pearl Ross, of the Kelowna General Hospital, accompanied by her sister, Miss Winnifred Ross, of Victoria, has left for Winnipeg, to spend a month's holiday with friends there. Mrs. Watkins has left on an inspection trip in connection with her work and while away will visit Nanaimo, Alberni, Cumberland, Courtenay and Campbell River. Mrs. Gowen accompanied Mrs. Watkins on the trip. Mr. and Mrs. Brockington, of Meville, near Brandon, who for the past ten years have been annual visitors in Victoria, have arrived to spend a couple of months holiday here and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dunington, Menzies Street. Mrs. W. M. Lawrence, Island Road, was hostess at the tea-hour yesterday in honor of her sisters, Mrs. Teifer, of Revelstoke and Mrs. MacDonald, of Edmonton, both of whom are the guests of Mrs. Lawrence for the summer months. Mrs. H. West and her two sons, of Kamloops, arrived on this afternoon's boat to spend the summer holiday with her brother and sister-in-law, Captain and Mrs. R. Whaddon, of Hollywood Crescent. She was accompanied by her cousin, Miss F. Lake, of London, England, who has been making a holiday tour of Canada. Coming North to attend the wedding at Tacoma of tomorrow noon of Miss Dorothy Alexander, daughter of H. F. Alexander, president of the Pacific Steamship Company, Captain Robert Dollar and Mrs. Dollar arrived here from San Francisco yesterday. They proceeded to Tacoma this morning. The silver tea held under the auspices of the Pythian Sisters at the home of Sister Cole, 1913 Pendergast Street, on Wednesday proved very successful. These teas are being held for the purpose of raising funds for the sale of work to be held in the near future. The next tea will be held at the home of Sister Anderson, 408 Dallas Road, on Wednesday next. An exceptionally fine programme of music will be contributed by the following artists: Miss Eva Hart, Mr. E. Petrol, Mr. L. U. Conyers, Jr., and the Hudson's Bay Trio, comprising violin, Mrs. Waram; violoncello, Miss Mead-Robins, and piano, Mrs. A. J. Gibson. Grecian dances by Madame Valda and her pupils will also be an attraction. Afternoon tea, ices, candy and soft drinks will be served during the proceedings, which offer a pleasing and novel entertainment.

GARDEN PARTY IS GREAT SUCCESS

Successful Gathering for Women's Missionary Society Cause

A very pleasant and enjoyable event was the garden party held at the home of Mrs. Casack, 931 Pemberton Road, yesterday afternoon, in aid of the Women's Missionary Society of the Metropolitan Methodist Church. The pretty gardens were visited by a large number of guests during the afternoon, who gave generous patronage to the dainty stalls which were arranged about the grounds and to the diversions provided for their entertainment. Tea was served under the direction of Mrs. Walter Staneland, Mrs. Sherratt and others, and ice cream was a popular refreshment in charge of Mesdames Robert-McKeown and Koyle. Stalls of home-cooking and home-made candy were an attractive source of revenue under the direction respectively of Mesdames Flurry, McComb and Hamel, and Mesdames Fullerton and Siddall. After the stalls had been inspected and purchases selected, various pastimes were indulged in, the croquet lawn being under the direction of Mrs. W. J. Sipprell, and clock golf being under the supervision of Mrs. W. E. Turner. The affair, which was formally opened at 3 o'clock by Mrs. Sipprell, was a great success, various pastimes being raised through its activities, and much credit is due to Mrs. Kinney, president of the W. M. S., and general convener, Mrs. Walter Staneland, head of the committee of management, and to all who worked so assiduously for the cause.

BEAUTIFUL SCENE FOR GARDEN FETE

Is Held at Windhaugh; Flowers at Their Best

One of the most delightful functions of the Summer was held yesterday at Windhaugh. Fairfield Road, when Mrs. J. H. Todd, Mrs. A. E. Todd, Mrs. J. H. Gillespie and Mrs. Alex. Gillespie were joint hostesses at a charming garden fete. The grounds, now at the height of their Summer beauty, were a riotous mass of color and fragrance, the rambling roses which clustered along arch and trellis being especially beautiful, while every trim flower border and rockery were aglow with choice blooms. Guests to the number of three hundred were present during the afternoon, and entered with every enjoyment into the numerous pastimes provided. Tennis and bowls claimed their respective devotees on the lower lawn, while clock golf for the grown-ups and skipping for the children arranged for on the upper lawn were a source of pleasure to many. The tea-pavilion, with its garlanded pillars of roses and massed spirals of bushes, was a charming picture, and much admiration was expressed of the unusual variety and the rarity of the floral display, which began with two charming borders of varicolored penesma outlining the driveway outside the entrance gates and filled every vista with masses of Canterbury bells, sweetwilliams, columbines, nepeta, Shasta daisies, mullein, pansies and snapdragons, white foxgloves and delphiniums raised their glowing spires against the dusky green of the enclosing hedges. A piper, a striking figure in his Highland dress, paraded the upper terrace, and played a heart-stirring selection of reels and strathspeys during the afternoon. ILLUSTRATED TRAVELOGUE Will Be Given by Mrs. Cuppage on Tuesday. While Summer days make every one long for a holiday trip in beautiful British Columbia an opportunity to see many interesting parts of the country will present itself in the form of an illustrated travelogue to be given next Tuesday evening, July 18, in the Orange Hall, Courtney Street, in aid of the Merville fire sufferers. A varied collection of views of Vancouver Island and the Mainland will be shown by Mrs. E. M. Cuppage in a benefit travel lecture under the auspices of the Victoria

Turning the Searchlight of Publicity on the PROSECUTION of CHIROPRACTORS

—as instigated by the medical men

The Chiropractors of British Columbia are being persecuted. Several have been thrown into jail—many have been heavily fined—and thirteen are being prosecuted at the present time with jail sentences practically inevitable, if present conditions continue to be tolerated by the people of British Columbia.

The Medical men of British Columbia are behind this prosecution. Their object is to force the Chiropractor to cease rendering aid to the sick and the suffering. This, in spite of the fact, that hundreds—yes thousands—of men, women and children—right here in British Columbia—have testified that the Chiropractors have alleviated their sufferings—in many cases making permanent cures—after the Medical men have failed. Here are the simple facts:

The Medical Association of British Columbia have had framed a certain law. This law states that no person may render aid to the sick or the suffering for gain, unless that person passes a certain examination as provided by the Medical Association themselves. This examination requires a knowledge of Medicines and other forms of Drugs. The Chiropractor, not using Drugs in any form whatsoever, has acquired no knowledge as required by their examination. Consequently, it is impossible for the Chiropractor to qualify according to the Medical Men's standard.

It is at once apparent that the Medical men have had created restrictions which give them the sole right to attempt to alleviate the suffer-

"Puzzlehead" they had called him at his preparatory school—Old Puzzehead Sabre, the chap who always wrinkled his brow over things and came out with the most extraordinary ideas. He had remained, and increasingly become, the puzzle. And precisely as he ceased to share a room with Mabel and carried himself with satisfaction to his own apartment, so, by this fifth year of his marriage, he came to know well that he shared no thoughts with her; he carried them, with increasing absorption in their interest, to the process of his own mind.

An incident of those early school days had always remained with him, in its exact words. The exact words of a selecty famous professor of philosophy who, living the few years of his retirement in the neighborhood of the preparatory school, had given—for purpose of feeling young things and feeling the freshness of young minds—a weekly "talk on things" to the small school boys. And whatever the subject of his talk, he almost invariably would work off his familiar counsel:

"And a very good thing (he used to say), an essential, the very best of practices, is to write a little every day. Just a little scrap, but cultivate the habit of doing it every day. I don't mean what is called keeping a diary, you know. Don't write what you do. There's no benefit in that. We do things for all kinds of reasons, and it's not the things, that matter. Let your little daily scrap be something you've thought. What you've done belongs partly to the past, and often you're made to do it. But what you think is your own; you write it down and there it is, a tiny little bit of you that you can look at and say, 'Well, really?' You see, a little bit like that, written every day, is a mirror in which you can see your real self and correct your aim. A looking-glass shows you your face is dirty or your hair rumpled, and you go and polish up. But it's ever so much more important to have a mirror that shows you how your real self, your mind, your spirit, is looking. Just see if you can't do it. A little every day, it's very steady; very steady."

And his small hearers, desiring, like young colts in a field, nothing but a popper school joke, "Oh, go, and write a little every day and boil yourself, you ass!" But it appealed, dimly, to the reflective quality in his bookish nature—much more contracted the habit of writing, in a "bagged" exercise book, sentences beginning laboriously with "I thought" or "I believe," and then, as he grew up, in the practice of writing sometimes ideas that occurred to him, as in the case of his feelings about the problems, and working strongly—in deliberately thinking out ideas.

You yourself. The real you. In the increasing isolation of his married life, it came to be something into which he could retire, as into a private chamber, which he could shut out from the world, and within the privacy of the chamber, he received a sense of detachment from normal life in which, vaguely, he pondered things.

Vaguely—without solution of most of the puzzles that perplexed him, and without even definite knowledge of the line along which solution might lie. Here, in these cloisters of another room, he would pace around his ideas as a man might pace around the dismantled and scattered intricacies of an intricate machine, or as a mechanic could be put together and the thing worked usefully, not knowing how or what it could be done. "This goes in there and that goes in there, but how on earth—?" Here, in these cloisters, he dragged the parts of all the puzzles that perplexed him; his relations with his men, in a hundred ways as they came up; the odd business that life was; his strong interest in the social and industrial problems, and the political questions from time to time before the public attention.

He could be imagined assembling the parts, dragging them in, checking them over, slamming the doors, and—how on earth? What on earth? There was a key to all these problems. There was a definite way of coordinating the parts of each. But what?

He began to have the feeling that in all the puzzles that perplexed him, particularly, of his own life, he had come to "live it," but of life in general as it is lived, some mysterious part was missing.

That was as far as he could get. He was like a man groping with his hand through a hole in a great door, for a key lying on the other side. Nothing was to be seen through the hole, and only the arm to the elbow could get through it. Not the shape of the key nor its position was known. But he was absolutely certain it was there. One day he might put his hand on it.

married, "a good-looking girl"; also that he had married "a very nice girl"; those were the expressions which he used to describe her. She liked the company of men and she was much liked by men (the opinion of the garrulous Hapgood Sabre, who recalled in this connection, she very much liked the society of women of her own age or older than herself, and she was very popular with such. She did not like girls, married or unmarried).

Mabel belonged to that considerable class of persons who, in conversation, begin half their sentences with "And just imagine—" or "And only fancy—"; or "And do you know—". These exclamations, delivered with much excitement, are introductory to matters considered extraordinary. Their users might therefore be imagined somewhat easily astonished. But they have a compensatory steadiness of mind in regard to much that mystifies other people. To Mabel there was nothing mysterious in birth, or in living, or in death. She simply would not have understood had she been told there was any mystery in these things.

One was born, one lived, one died. What was there there odd about it? Nor did she see anything mysterious in the intense preoccupation of a primrose growing at all odd of a tree. An insect—you killed it. A flower—you plucked it. What's the mystery?

Her life was living among people of her own class. Her measure of a man or of a woman was, were they of her class? If they were, she gladly accepted them and appeared to find considerable pleasure in their society. Whether they had attractive qualities or unattractive qualities or no qualities at all did not affect her. The only quality that mattered was the quality of being well-bred, and she liked the class her own standard of breeding. "The lower classes," and so long as they left her alone she was perfectly content to leave them alone. In certain aspects she liked them. She liked "a civil tradesman" immensely; she liked a civil charwoman immensely; and she liked a civil workman immensely. It gave her as much pleasure, real pleasure, that she felt in all her emotions, to receive civility from the classes that ministered to her class—servants, tradespeople, gardeners, carpenters, plumbers, postmen, policemen—as to meet any of her own class. It never occurred to her to reckon up how enormously varied was the class whose happy fortune it was to minister to her class, and she would not have been in the remotest degree interested if any one had told her how numerous the class was. It never occurred to her that any of these people had homes of their own. She had her that the whole of the lower classes lived without any margin at all beyond keeping their homes together, or that if they stopped working they lost their homes, or that they looked forward to nothing beyond their working years because there was nothing beyond the working years for them to look forward to.

Nor would it have interested her in the remotest degree to hear that the lower classes was that they were disgustingly extravagant and spent every penny they earned. The woman across the Green, who had been washing had six children and a husband who was an agricultural laborer and these eight lived in three rooms and "if you please" they actually bought a gramophone! Mabel instanced it for years after the first heard it. The woman who had a car, she spent her three rooms lividly of an evening was scandalous to Mabel. She heard of the gramophone outrage in 1908 and she was still instancing it in 1912. "And those are the people, mind you," she said in 1912, "that we have to pay these National Insurance stamps for!"

CAN YOU "BEET" IT?

Harry, while on a visit to the country, became deeply interested in watching an old gaddner. After a while the following dialogue took place:

Gardener: "Some fine vegetables here!" Harry: "Rather!" Gardener: "I once grew a cabbage which, when cut in two and the heart removed, made a grand cradle for kiddies!" Harry: "It must have been a fine one! But we have some big vegetable in London. I remember three men sleeping on one beat!" Gardener: "Three men?" Harry: "Yes, policemen!"—Tit-Bits.

He too has added an historic event in his life in the fact that he was the first tenor to be engaged at the opening of the first radio-phonograph at Toronto, arranged and given by the "Toronto Star." This engagement was brought about by no less a person than Mr. Bridle, the Star's musical critic and writer, who had for some time recognized the gifts of the tenor.

LATE ADMIRAL PLAYED FIRST CRICKET MATCH ON VANCOUVER ISLAND

Admiral Moresby Dies in England, Aged 92

Admiral John Moresby, the celebrated explorer, who played in the first cricket game in the history of Vancouver Island, died at Fareham, England, this week. The late admiral's cricket game on May 23, 1852, the team of H.M.S. Thetis, on which Admiral Moresby was then a lieutenant, hoopedly defeated the local team, called the "All Vancouver," at Beacon Hill. In the same year, when the Thetis was at Queen Charlotte Island, Admiral Moresby and Nowell Salmon, one of the Englishmen, explored the mountain lakes above Port Kuper and they were named Moresby Lakes. It was in 1872, when in command of H.M.S. Basilisk, that Admiral Moresby won international fame by exploring the coast of New Guinea, whose capital, Port Moresby, was named after him. The discoveries of the Basilisk, in fact, were the last extensive maritime exploring voyages possible between the Arctic and Antarctic circles. Admiral Moresby was the son of Rear-Admiral Sir Fairfax Moresby, commander of the Pacific station at the time when the late Admiral was here on the Thetis.

An Irish priest who had been of very bad terms with his late bishop was visiting the new occupant of the see.

WORRIED WOMEN NEED RICH BLOOD

If the Blood is Not Kept Pure Health Will Break Down.

It is useless to tell a hard working woman to take life easily and not to worry. To do so is to ask the almost impossible. But, at the same time, it is the duty of every woman to save her strength to meet any unusual demands. It is a duty she owes herself and family for her future health may depend upon it.

To guard against a complete breakdown in health the blood must be kept rich, red and pure. No other medicine does this so well as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This medicine strengthens the nerves, restores the appetite and keeps every organ healthily toned up. Women cannot always rest when they should, but they can keep their strength by the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Among those who have found benefit from this medicine is Mrs. Cora Conrad, Broad Cove, N. S., who says: "My system was very much run down, and my blood poor and watery. I suffered a great deal from headaches and dizziness; my appetite was poor, and I tired easily. I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and have every reason to be glad that I did so. Soon I felt better, and under the continued use of the pills the headaches and dizziness were gone, and my blood seemed in a better condition than before. For this reason I recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Beauty of Line and Luxury Represented In Empress of Australia

Newest Addition to Canadian Pacific Ocean Fleet Will Be Popular Ship With Trans-Pacific Travellers; Sumptuous Furnishings and Commodious Saloons Rival Those of Empress of Canada.

One of the finest and most luxuriously equipped steamships in the world, the new Empress of Australia, will be a notable addition to the Canadian Pacific fleet on the Pacific. In luxury and comfort she is said to eclipse the palatial Empress of Canada.

The Empress of Australia was built in 1913, but, owing to the war, was not completed until last year. She is adapted, like the Empress of Canada and the Empress of Scotland and Empress of Britain, for burning fuel oil. She is a twin-screw steel steamship of 21,500 tons.

Principal Dimensions

The principal dimensions of the Empress of Australia are: Length, 611 ft.; breadth, 75 ft.; and depth, to upper deck, 46 ft. 2 1/2 in. She is of the shelter-deck type, with a continuous bridge deck extending the full length of the vessel.

Above the bridge deck there are two complete lower decks below the shelter deck, and lower and orlop decks at the fore end, and lower deck at the after end of the ship. The vessel has a straight stem, elliptical stern, three funnels and two masts, and has a very handsome appearance. The Empress of Australia like all Canadian Pacific ships, is classed at Lloyd's, has a full Board of Trade certificate as a passenger ship, and is well sub-divided by water-tight bulkheads. There is a cellular double bottom extending fore and aft for almost the complete length of the vessel. Oil fuel is carried in the forward bunkers, and there are large cargo compartments forward and aft of the engine and boiler rooms.

Passenger Accommodation.

Spacious and well-fitted accommodation is provided for about 400 first-class, 165 second-class, and 260 third-class, and 670 steerage, together with a crew of 520. The first-class accommodation is arranged on "A," "B," "C," "D," and "E" decks in large staterooms for one, two, and three persons each. All these staterooms are fitted with beds, there being no upper berths in any of the first-class rooms. In addition, there are eight large suites with private bath and toilet. The two suites on "B" deck amidships comprise a dining room, salon, bedroom, bathroom and toilet, maid or valet's room, and also a large bedroom. These suites are arranged that a large additional bedroom can be added if required. The other two aftermost suites on this deck are so arranged that they can be used as a large bedroom with private bathroom and toilet, or as a bathroom and bedroom with private sitting-room and toilet, a sliding door being fitted between the two rooms. To other large suites each comprising sitting-room, bedroom, private bathroom and toilet, also

DOMINION

What's an ordinary sneak-thief to a woman brave enough to face the camera without a tremor!

So when Wanda Hawley walked into her Hollywood home the other afternoon, accompanied by two girl friends, and heard noises upstairs, where no one was supposed to be, she didn't faint away, or anything like it. She sternly commanded her uninvited companions to silence, walked to the phone and summoned the police. Then she took her business-like little automatic out of a desk-drawer and marched upstairs. Scattered about her bedroom were her valuables, as if the startled thief might have dropped them at hearing persons below. A window was open, and the bird had flown without his intended plunder. If the other girls had been as brave as Wanda, and had telephoned for the police while she hurried upstairs, she might have "brought in her man."

AMUSEMENTS TO-DAY

Dominion—"The Woman Who Walked Alone."
Royal—"The Ruling Passion."
Columbia—"Fighting Mad."
Capitol—"Room and Board."

The George Melford Paramount production which is being shown at the Dominion Theatre this week, Dorothy Dalton is featured. Milton Sills is leading man and the large supporting cast includes E. J. Ladell, Har- Mayne, Kelson, John Davidson, Har- is Gordon, Charles Ogle, Mabel Van Buren, "Lefty" Flynn, Cecil Holland, John McKinnon, Temple, Pigott and Frederick Vroom.

ROYAL VICTORIA

There is a lesson of especial importance to be learned from "The Ruling Passion," a comedy drama motion picture in which George Arliss, celebrated character actor of the stage, is starred, and which will be shown in the Royal Victoria Theatre for the first time to-day. This is a lesson of honesty in business, and will not be lost to those who see it.

Briefly, the picture tells the story of a very wealthy man who is obliged to retire from business because of failing health. While "resting" in his country home, the suggestion is made to him that he go into some little business to "keep his hand in," so to speak. This he does by acquiring a half interest in a back country garage, while the man who sold the garage opens another on a new State road two miles distant, knowing that with the opening of the new road the old garage will be valueless.

"Jim" Alden (Mr. Arliss) buys the garage, and he and his young partner, during several hours on the first morning of "Grant and Merrick's" occupancy of the old garage, no business comes their way, although on the previous Saturday business was "rushing." "Grant" (the name Alden masquerades under), instantly appreciating the situation, sets right out to fight the injustice.

With "Jim" Alden it is a fight for a principle.

All his life Alden has met every business proposition with integrity and honesty, and the meanness of "Peterson" who sold the old garage knowing that its days of usefulness had passed, stung Alden as perhaps nothing in his whole life. The knowledge that young "Bill" Merrick (Edward J. Burns) has put his last dollar into the partnership had its effect on Alden, but underlying every consideration was the failure of "Peterson" properly to observe the ethics of business, which to Alden was unthinkable.

And there and then, without even a whisper of his intent, Alden plunges into the invigorating task of undoing the wrong perpetrated by "Peterson." Back of the fight goes all of the Alden millions—but Merrick, the clean-cut, honest youth, does not know that Grant is Alden, but on the contrary, Alden explains to his young partner that he has a wife and daughter dependent upon him, all of which is very true, Merrick's sympathy goes out to Grant, with no one dependent upon him. This is the first bond of sympathy between the two men, but as the fight wages furiously, Grant comes to know that young Merrick is pure gold, and being the father of an eligible daughter, Alden does not look askance at Merrick's efforts to win Angie Alden.

The building of a new garage on the site of an old barn opposite the new garage which Peterson has built, open hostilities, and the war goes on until Peterson gives up. Alden's million cannot lose—but with Alden it is simply a fight for a principle.

CAPITOL

It not infrequently happens, in motion picture production, that the final scenes are photographed before some of the earlier scenes. Scenes of a production are practically never made in the sequence of the story. All exteriors, especially on locations that require a long trip, are grouped for the sake of convenience, and thus it frequently happens that the opening and closing scenes are made on the same day.

The photographer engaged on the production of Constance Binney's latest Realart release, "Room and Board," had an unusual experience. For some reason the final fade-out had not been made till the last day of work and the star and her leading man, who had been busy all day, had to wait until sundown, as Director Alan Crosland had planned to have the two principals enact their last love scene silhouetted against an evening sky.

The sun began to descend, and Miss Binney, and Tom Carrigan, her leading man, began their scene. When Director Crosland finally called "Fade out!" the photographer, George Foley, heaved a huge sigh of relief. "Phew! That was a close call," he gasped. "I shot that scene with my last yard of celluloid, and if you'd had that kiss last a minute longer we'd have had to do it to-morrow. I've used up every inch of my film."

COLUMBIA

Breaking in a horse to do stunts before the camera proved more of a job than getting the animal accustomed to the noise of firearms and carefully threading its way over wild country as it has to do in William Desmond's latest picture, "Fighting Mad," a Metro release for William Desmond Productions, which will be shown at the Columbia Theatre again to-day for the last time. Desmond, who is one of the finest riders in the country and considerable of a stunt performer on horseback, had to use a horse not so well accustomed to the lights and camera when his regular performing pony received a bad sprain. The substitute horse went along all right in rehearsal, but when the camera started to grind he developed a case of camera fright which it took many hours of patient work to cure. "Fighting Mad" was adapted from the original story of H. H. Van Loan. It was directed by Joseph J. Franz and photographed by Harry A. Gersted.

"THE FOUR HORSEMEN"

In "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," the Rex Ingram production for Metro, at the Capitol Theatre next week, motion picture fans will find in small roles the two persons who are chiefly responsible for the artistic translation of the screen of the novel by Vincente Blasco Ibañez. They are June Mathis, who translated the Spanish novel for the screen, and Director Ingram.

In the Parisian dance hall scene Mr. Ingram was instructing an "extra" when Miss Mathis came to his aid. "Take the part," said the director. Later when Mr. Ingram was rehearsing a male "extra," Miss Mathis came back at him with the suggestion he take the part. "Since you do that particular thing so well, why don't you take the part and act it in the picture?" He did.

Every mother knows how fatal the hot Summer months are to small children. Cholera, infantum, diarrhoea, dysentery, colic and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours' illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevents stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BAULKED THE BARBER

Mr. Blank is fond of relating how he scored off a barber who wished to make a sale. The man had just shaved him and wanted to sell him a lotion to use on his face when he shaved himself. "Is that what you use on your customers?" asked Blank. "No," replied the barber, "it's so expensive I cannot afford it."

ROAD DUST IN CRANK-BASE IS MORE COSTLY

Frequent Cleansing of Crank-case Helps to Reduce Costs

Manufacturers of motor cars have long recognized the necessity of frequent crank case cleaning. The importance of renewing the oil in the crank case every 500 or 1,000 miles is emphasized in most of the instruction books issued by motor car manufacturers.

Through the work of motor manufacturing companies and the work of dealers, who have equipped themselves to take care of the job, a number of motorists have been induced to have their crank cases cleaned regularly, but there are still far too many motorists who neglect to do so.

Road-dust and sand work their way into the crank case to mingle with the oil and metallic particles to form a grind away moving parts and reduce the efficiency of the motor. Then, too, the oil in the crank case will, in time, wear out or become diluted by fuel mixtures and thus lose a great deal of its lubricating value. This dilution is, in some cases, very rapid, due to faulty carburetor adjustment or mechanical defects.

The use of inferior motor lubricants and poor motor fuels, may aggravate the difficulty, but no lubricating oil can maintain a piston-to-cylinder seal over a piston clearance which has been made excessive through wear. Neither can any lubricating oil withstand the cutting of a "too wet" or too rich fuel mixture. The remedy lies in changing the oil frequently after thoroughly cleaning the crank case.

It is not enough to merely drain the oil out of the crank case and refill with fresh oil. Dust, grit and metallic particles may lodge in the crevices and the congealed oil which adheres to the side of the crank case. The foreign matter thus retained will seriously interfere with the lubricating qualities of the fresh oil. Before refilling the crank case, it should, therefore, be thoroughly cleaned.

One of the best ways to clean the crank case is to flush it out with a light grade of oil. There are many objections to the use of kerosene or gasoline for flushing. After cleaning with any one of these fuel oils, it is impossible to drain it entirely, a small portion of the coal oil or gasoline is almost certain to remain at the bottom of the crank case. This will dilute the fresh supply of oil and destroy its lubricating value.

Many dealers have prepared themselves to deliver expert crank case service. Cleaning the crank is, at best, a dirty job and motorists will be usually better satisfied to go to a reliable dealer to have the work done. Motorists should, however, make sure that who ever does the job, does it thoroughly and uses the proper flushing agent.

A drive which is being put on simultaneously in many cities and towns throughout the Dominion by retailers handling lubricating oils, and garages who are specially equipped to handle crank case cleaning jobs, and which is to be backed by a rather extensive educational campaign, is significant. Through this drive it is hoped that more motorists can be induced to adopt the practice of frequent crank case cleaning. Beyond doubt, all motorists who do accept the plan will benefit by securing more satisfaction and very agreeable reductions in operating expenses.

Radio enthusiasts will be interested in the new type Willard "E" batteries being shown by the Rolfe Electric and Battery Co., on Yates Street. These batteries are of 24 volt type, with plates of great thickness but small width, separated by rubber of more than ordinary stoutness. Each of the cells is composed of a glass tube with a hard rubber cap, the whole being assembled in an open carrying rack of wood.

All Makes of Batteries Are Welcome Here!

Some drivers of cars not equipped with Willard Batteries, think they ought to go to the service station that sold the battery. Not at all!

The safest rule is to go to the place that gives you the best attention, has the most skilled workmen and seems to be best equipped to give battery service—the place that deserves the title of "Battery Headquarters."

That's the kind of battery station we have always conducted and always expect to conduct.

Come in and we'll show you how near to 100 per cent we are in skill, courtesy and promptness.

STRIPPED OF PRIDE, GREAT CARS STILL DO GOOD WORK

Fine Materials in High Grade Cars Not Always Scrapped By Age

"What becomes of the old cars" is a constant query among both experienced and novice motorists, and in the aftermath of many a good car there lies a tale of drudgery and low estate which would be incredible to the owners of the road palaces of a dozen years ago.

Whoever owned a Cadillac in 1912 considered himself the possessor of the cream of the motoring world; while the Cole enthusiast was ever prepared to contest the field of primacy point by point. Yet to-day in Victoria, Cole and Cadillac, together with humble Ford and a score of others, are combined in at least one instance, and instead of conveying merrily to the theatre or garden party, perform in unison to-day the humble duty of transporting a load of pigs from Sooke to the place of death, or but yesterday aided Mamselle Jersey heifer of Metehosin to travel the road of life to North Saanich.

A Skillful Workman.
Such is the present forte of ancient lords of the highway; combined together through the ingenuity of Stan Davies, a returned soldier, who has a practical bent towards mechanics and secured the run of the great parts collection to be found at "Junkies."

The Mighty Fellen.
With a Cadillac main frame, Cole rear-end, a Tudhope engine and radiator, a German magneto and wheels from a car from Old Erin, and a Ford carburetor, Davies created a one-ton truck which saw two years of service for one of the large city dairies, and is now standing up to the gruelling work of rural haulage.

The secret of this ability is the fact that the chief components of this veteran are strictly standard, were selected and made for cars supporting the reputation of solid business ventures, and although ranging in age from 1906 issues up to 1912, are not to be excelled for quality.

Incidentally the cost of this truck, ready for the road, worked out at about $300, at a time when any standard factory truck, of equal quality parts, was not to be had for ten times the money.

PROGRESS ON ROADS

The Victoria Automobile Club has improved its service of reports on the condition of the roads in the State of Washington. Several members who have recently returned from Washington cities express their satisfaction at courtesies extended to them in other cities. A number of complaints from members with regard to the condition of the Mahahat and Fitzgerald roads have been received. The matter has been taken up with the Minister of Public Works, and he has been requested to have repairs ordered at once.

EASE OF RIDING MARKS NEW JEWETT

Dominion Garage Has Light Paige on View

"Ernie" Eve, of the Dominion Garage, is proudly telling of the attributes of the new Jewett car which he has recently undertaken to handle on Vancouver Island. "I took one of these cars up to Duncan last week, and never had to change gears from the time I left Victoria. I was out to take the car up and come back again with that record, but on Cowichan Hill I had bad luck. An ancient Ford had found the clims too much and had squatted down in the middle of the trail, putting me into second gear to get around by way of the ditch," he said.

The new Jewett is made by the Paige interests and is named after the president of the company. It is a shortened edition of the Glenbrook model Paige which made such a name two years ago, with the same power plant and a most remarkable ease of riding. The fifty horse power given by the six cylinders is unusually high for a car weighing but 2,500 pounds, but the gasoline economy at touring speed has proven itself at twenty-three miles to the gallon, chiefly because the real power of the car is rarely called upon.

This engine had been deeply scored through lack of proper lubrication, and an inexpensive process rendered the casting as good as new, a replacement from the factory being worth more than $250.

There is need for special skill in operating this type of renovator, as was instanced with the Packard block under treatment. One of the cylinders had suffered far more seriously than the others, and to turn out a good job it was necessary to enlarge for a Packard cylinder block which had been in use for many years was large this by 25 thousands, and apply a like enlargement to the balancing cylinder, the other two being enlarged but ten thousands, all receiving a remarkably smooth finish.

Pistons of an extremely light type, made of grey iron little thicker than stout paper, are ground down to within two thousands of the same size as the cylinders, and the engine, when re-assembled, proved to have as much or more power than when first put out by the factory, while its life had been renewed for an indefinite term.

NEW TYPE RADIO BATTERY HAS UNUSUAL LIFE

Owing to the fact that radio "A" batteries are used in service without a charging medium, to get the full benefit of the total capacity of the battery it is necessary to have perfect insulation between the plates. In any internal leakage occurs, the periods of service between charges will be greatly shortened. The low discharge rate of these batteries permit the use of a much tougher insulator than is customary in automobile starting batteries. High porosity is not essential, therefore stronger woods may be chosen for radio insulators than can be used in ordinary automobile service.

This fact gives possibility of a particularly good insulation, assuring the user all the current of which the battery is capable and reducing the cost of recharging to a minimum. This feature of radio requirements is a prominent factor in the long service built into the Radio "A" batteries which the McCandless Battery Co., Ltd., are building in Victoria, the insulators used being of unusual strength and durability.

Ask Your Dealer For Crank Case Service

You probably realize the importance of having your crank case cleaned every 750 to 1000 miles. But it is dirty work. You dislike to do it yourself. Why not have it done for you?

There is an Imperial Crank Case Service dealer near you who maintains a modern crank case cleaning department and he will gladly have an expert do the job properly.

And what is most important—he will use Imperial Flushing Oil for cleaning your crank case. No danger then of diluting the fresh oil which is added later as might be the case if coal oil (kerosene) were used for flushing purposes.

Make it a special point to drive 'round to the Imperial Crank Case dealer's sometime during the next week. Let him tell you more about this service that saves your car and saves you money.

IMPERIAL OIL LIMITED
British Columbia Sales Branch:
VANCOUVER, B.C.

Dead Oil Removed
Even the best oil you can buy wears out in time and loses much of its lubricating efficiency. It then fails to maintain the proper piston seal. Power goes to waste. Wearing surfaces no longer receive proper protection. It is of the utmost importance that you have the old oil drained out of your crank case frequently.

All Parts Thoroughly Cleaned
Merely draining the crank case is not sufficient. Metal particles, road dust, dirt, grit and carbon have a tendency to adhere to the metal parts of your engine when the oil is drawn off. Imperial Crank Case Service dealers use Imperial Flushing Oil, a scientific cleansing agent, which removes all foreign matter and thoroughly flushes out your engine and crank case.

Refilled with Fresh Oil
No one grade of oil could properly lubricate all different makes and models of automobiles and trucks. Different types require a special grade of oil, suited to their construction and operating conditions. The Imperial Crank Case Service dealer who refills your crank case, will use the grade of Imperial Polarine recommended for your car on the Imperial Chart—an infallible guide to proper lubrication.

Second Week of Camera Lovers' Contest.

PERHAPS no time is more opportune than the Summer holidays for making headway with a hobby. Of many excellent hobbies, that of photography lends itself to the desire for out-of-door recreation in a manner that makes it admirably suitable for the Summer vacations.

This is the second week of the contest, with the past week, however, lacking in some measure the usual sunny weather that is usually experienced. For the benefit of new readers let it be stated that the contest is open to all of sixteen years of age and under, with weekly prizes and a series of final awards to be made after the closing date, August 31.

A prize of one dollar will be given weekly for the best entry, with two other prizes of half that amount. At the end of the contest the best entry will be awarded five dollars, while second and third prizes of three and two dollars respectively will be given. In addition a special prize will be given for the best series of pictures.

Weekly Prizes Given.

It has been said that he who keeps a diary and a photograph album carefully has a complete record of life between their united pages. The diary tells of what was done, and the photograph album shows in what manner, and serves to keep a faithful record of the familiar faces that one-by-one drop out of our lives as the year rolls on.

Of all places in the world perhaps Vancouver Island presents the most wonderful opportunities for excellent pictures, ranging from the quiet home life of the countryside to the wild deer in the woods, from the salmon leaping in the rivers to the tame red squirrel on a log, scolding all and sundry who whirr him per a pine cone.

A word in explanation of the actual contest, as to the three classes under which photographs may be included, for the benefit of new readers: Under novelties will come anything that strikes the contributor as rare or unusual. A good example of this would be the sight of porpoise jumping in schools off the coast; a dead shark washed up on the beach; a breaking a sea shell; or a word the many little sights that we know happen yet seldom are lucky enough to witness.

There is little need to enlarge on the group of photographs to be submitted under the heading of beautiful places. By land and seaside the beautiful places to be seen on this island are myriad in their number, and need no extolling at this stage. Nor is it necessary to travel far to find the beauties of the island, for right within the limits of this city alone may be found some of the most beautiful views imaginable.

Of course under the heading of people fall perhaps the most engaging group of all. The many little studies of our playmates form a charming example of this section of the contest. What could be more entertaining or suitable for an album than the sight of a little toddler making his first steps, or a boy with his pup, what a wide range may be included in this class? This type of photograph is readily available to all, for the camera-hunter has no need to stray beyond the limits of the garden.

Starting out for the first time with a camera the learner is apt to be overawed with the magnitude of the task ahead, but with a little care, and by following the simple directions generally given with cameras no trouble should be experienced. Of course many of our readers will be adepts with a camera, and these remarks do not apply to them, but to the learner exclusively.

If it had to be put into a few words, don't take your camera as a puzzle box, not yet as an automatic machine for finding a good picture and holding it. It is neither, but somewhere between the two, perhaps. You have but to understand the actual working of the camera, and to select the subject you want and the matters as finding the right length of exposure and light will be told you by your elders, and will be learned by yourself as your pursuit of the hobby broadens with experience.

If anything should be emphasized let it be a real study of the camera itself before any pictures are attempted. Take it apart, empty it, then see what results from the various manipulations of the few levers that have to be handled. You will see how the diaphragm is altered to suit the amount of light required, and how the focusing is accomplished. Take it apart in the average film camera beyond setting the lens at the right mark of the scale no trouble with focus is experienced.

If doubts remain from a survey of the camera, stop there and get the matter explained to you. Having thoroughly mastered the camera, try and make a study of the relation of light and picture-making. You will find a few simple rules over the subject and practice will do the rest. Last, but by no means least, take your time about all operations, see that everything is right, and then go ahead. Just snapping a lever with the camera pointed anywhere is not taking pictures.

ANNIE DOLL'S SECRET WISH
ONCE in an attic corner lived a little doll named Annie. She was a very stylishly dressed doll in the days when she lived in the playroom, but that was long ago, and her ruffled gown, tightly fitted at the waist, was now quite out of style.

But this, of course, Annie Doll did not know. She wore her straw hat just as jauntily as in the by-gone days when it was the fashion to wear your hat turned up at one side with pink

Terrified Animals Flee From Fires

YEAR in and year out those in authority warn us of the danger of fire in the woods, and yet at this moment thousands and thousands of trees are burning on this island. Human life has been taken by the onrushing flames, and millions of dollars worth of valuable timber has been gutted. Not least of all many acres of wonderful standing timber, a beautiful sight and one perhaps not to be equalled for its very grandeur elsewhere in the country, have been burned and so blackened that nothing but a few sodden ashes remain.

You have read, little reader, of the terrible loss, in life and in dollars, and perhaps one phase of the fires has escaped your knowledge. What of the countless inhabitants of the woods, the little denizens of the feather kingdom, the deer, and the blundering but kindly old bears, what became of these? It is a sad tale, but one that should be a lesson to all who deal with fire in the woods.

Half of the room belonged to the little girl and the other to the boy, as along the centre of the floor was a wide painted strip of bright blue, so that only when they were invited to, do so could either cross the dividing line.

"I won't have Girl Doll sitting in my rocking horse," the little boy used to say when Annie's little mother sometimes would ask to play with the horses. "You can ride a little white and hold your doll, if you like," and through all the years Annie still had the secret longing to have her ride.

"Ab, it's here ye are," said Bridget, for she had lived in the house longer than Annie Doll. "I thought ye had gone long ago. We'll do I remember the Christmas old Santa brought you and all your pretty dresses."

Then old Bridget swept and dusted and made everything spandy clean. And then it happened. She picked up Annie Doll from her chair and set her in the seat between the two grey horses and placed the reins around her arms.

"There, take a ride, me darlint," she said. "I wish ye were all back in the playroom again, quarrelling."

Annie Doll began to be frightened when it neared the magic hour for, of course, the rocking horses would gallop and prance and try to throw her from her seat; but to her surprise they did nothing of the sort, for time had left its mark and they were glad to go at an easy pace and did not care a bit who held the reins over them now.

But whether Annie Doll is as happy as she thought she would be I cannot tell you. We make their way to safety, but what do they leave behind? Under the charred remains of what once were tall and stately trees are to be seen the bodies of their fellows, burned and almost unrecognizable.

It is the same with birds, from the lordly pheasant to the humble wren. Those on the edges of the fire centres flew to safety. Countless birds became frightened and flew into the fire, through the blinding smoke that concealed all. Yet others stood spellbound in the smoke until the fire crept on and added them to the death roll. Sadder still countless broods of this season's little birds were caught before they were able to fly and so perished.

Sad sights were seen by the fire-fighters. In one instance a party saw a big brown bear, standing on its hind legs in a stream. The bear had been burned off the lower half of its body and quite off its legs. Its feet were blistered by the hot ashes, over which it had trod to safety, and it sought the cooling water, but without relief. Deer were seen in groups, old and young together, all burned about the feet and legs. The silky hair charred off their slender bodies, and their eyes almost closed with the fierce heat of the flames.

We have heard of the loss of human life, in homes, and in standing timber, all of which will be felt for many a day by the Province, but little has been said about the inarticulate creatures, also with lives and homes, the denizens of Nature's Kingdom. Let us resolve that if we have occasion to light a fire in the woods that we will stay and see it out beyond the possibility of relighting. Let us watch the match until it has grown cold. Let us stamp on the cigarette flung down by a careless hand, or the hot scraping from a pipe left unheeded to set alight to such a fire as this. Care is a slight return for the many pleasures we enjoy in the woods, and by lack of it we are depriving ourselves of these very pleasures.

An Adventurous Trip

Still Further Adventures of Ben Smith and Tom Seeley. Contributed by Mrs. Harrison Eke.

"WHAT are you laughing at, looney?" he fumed. Didn't see nothing to laugh at. I'm going to ask for my money back." Tom made a step forward to where the man was lustily shouting the attraction through a megaphone.

"Say, Mister," cried Tom, "your show's a fraud, and I want my money back." The man gazed at Tom with a twinkle in his eye. "Don't get peevish, son," he returned laughing. "It's the best show in the fair. Try again." "No, thanks," said Tom. "Once bitten, twice shy." "Who bit ye?" questioned the man, grinning. "You did," promptly returned Tom. "I thought we were going to see a performance and real water."

"Aw, git away with ye, son. Ye saw the performance. What would ye have done if there'd been real water hurrying out the show that way? Ye'd been scrapping with the fishes instead of me. Now, wouldn't ye?" joked the man. Tom made no answer, instead he turned on his heel loftily and joined Ben who had moved away.

"That makes me tired," he raged, "cheating people like that." "Let's go in and see the snakes," suggested Ben, ignoring Tom's fury.

"No," said Tom in decided tones, "I won't go in another side show." Ben stood for a moment uncertain as to their next move, then suddenly he thought of Seth Lloyd.

"I know, Tom," he cried excitedly, "we'll find Seth. Maybe he'll let us look at his aeroplane." Tom was all attention. "The very thing," he agreed. "Where's the aerodrome?"

"Not far," replied Ben. "They've erected a tent in a field during the fair. See it over there?" Ben nodded in the direction. In a meadow not far distant stood a large tent in which rested the aeroplanes. They were not long reaching the tent and considered themselves fortunate in finding Seth Lloyd therein. "Hello, Seth," greeted Ben. It was their first meeting since the war.

"Hello, Ben, shake," returned the young aviator. He was pleased to meet Ben whom he had leached when a small boy. Their hands met.

"Meet Tom," said Ben as his hand dropped to his side. Tom shook hands. Then turning to Ben, Seth said. "You haven't grown any taller, Ben; but you've got mighty broad. Everywhere I look I see part of you."

"Now, Seth," laughed Ben, "I'm not as big as all that." "Pretty nearly," returned Seth, winking at Tom. "What are you doing now?" queried Ben, noticing Seth's oily fatigue suit. "Fixing the engine ready to make a trial flight."

"How much do you charge?" broke in Tom eagerly. "Ten dollars per," answered Seth shortly. "Lummie," returned Tom, disappointed. "Must be lots of millionaires in these parts." "Oh, everybody's a millionaire fair time. Looks like it anyway. They spend money like water."

"Tom wanted to go up for a dollar. I told him it was ten," said Ben. Seth Lloyd looked at the two boys thoughtfully, then suddenly he asked: "Would you boys like a trip?" "Would we?" returned Tom excitedly. "I should say we would, Ben." Tom gave Ben no chance to speak for himself; he answered Seth's question too quickly.

"Aw, I dunno," Ben replied slowly, "guess I'll go if Tom does." "It's up to you, Ben. If you would like to go just say the word. It won't cost you a cent." Ben looked at Tom a little dubiously. Tom nudged him.

"Say yes," he whispered. "All right, I'll go. Thanks very much," Ben said. "Right ho," was Seth's reply. He lost no time changing into uniform.

"Yes, fine life," he replied, smiling, "always up in the air" about something. "Get in," commanded Seth as they reached the plane. The two boys jumped into the cockpit and took their seats. The youthful pilot followed, starting the engine. Then suddenly with a roar the machine rushed across the field and swooped aloft.

"Where-e-e-e," shrieked Tom with delight, "now we're off, Lummie, Ben," he shouted. "Isn't this ripping?" Ben made no answer, he was fighting with sensations galore. Tom was too excited to feel physical discomfort. He shouted from one to the other. It was doubtful if either heard. After a while to Seth's surprise the engine began to miss. The compass indicated some distance from the ground. With the aid of glasses Seth picked out a suitable landing place. Then with a swoop they settled in an unknown area.

"What's the matter with you?" cried Tom, noticing Ben's pale face. "Were you scared?" "Scared nothing," returned Ben with bravado, now that he felt the hard soil once again beneath his feet. "I felt sick, that's all." "Where are we do you know?" asked Seth of the boys.

Ben's eyes wandered towards the river a short distance away, then to its thickly treed embankment. "Dunno, Seth," he replied, puzzled. "Not far from a town by the river, yonder. That is, if it isn't a forest fire." "You're a poor Job's comforter, you are," burst forth Tom. "Pretty nearly telling us we'll get burned alive."

"Nothing doing, there's the river, not much fear of that," he assured Tom. "Let's have a look round," Tom looked towards the river longingly. "It will pass the time away while Seth fixes the engine." "Good idea, Tom," returned Seth. "Don't go too far though. I'm due to make another trip in an hour. Governor General's niece want to see the man in the moon."

Then they started off with a laugh. "Wonder if there is any wild animals?" said Ben as they walked along. "There you go again," cried Tom irritably. "What'd you want to look for trouble for? It'll come plenty soon enough without saying 'How-dy-do' half way. Lummie, there's a boat." Tom flew to the water's edge.

"Someone lives hereabouts," said Tom as Ben came up. "Jimmy," returned Ben, "wonder who it belongs to of the under sea life." "Indian maybe." "Then we'll be scalped," warned Ben. "We'd better go back." Ben imagined all kinds of horrors, but Tom was horror-proof. He saw only pleasure and excitement in the adventure. (To Be Continued.)

Elegant and Practical Too

LOOKED on by the ancients as a tutelary deity who guided the mariner across the trackless sea and bespoke for him fair winds and calm weather, the Argonaut, and his half brother, the Nautilus, are perhaps two of the most interesting members of the great cephalopod family of the under sea life.

The argonaut has eight tentacles, two of which it expands and uses as a sail, spreading them fan wise on the top of the water, and six which it uses to hold itself in to its shell. Unlike most shell-living creatures it is not definitely attached to its house but must retain its hold thereon by physical force. When frightened the argonaut will extend its tentacles, thus retracting its sails and the shell will fill with water and sink. Those supposed by the ancients to travel by means of its sails and to row with its remaining six tentacles the argonaut really moves through the water by expelling a stream of water that it had previously inhaled for respiratory purposes.

Its shell is very thin and fragile, a spiral with the last turn almost disproportionately large. The exterior of the shell is deeply grooved, the channels converging on its centre. Its whole appearance is one of graceful elegance, and it has been often likened to a shallop, the sharp curve of the spiral being the prow.

The nautilus is even more curious and elegant than the graceful argonaut. Its shell is a beautiful structure, extremely delicate and fragile. Its exterior is ornamented with bands of a reddish yellow, while its interior is covered with a fine nacre-like mother-of-pearl substance to be seen inside any section shell.

The shell of the nautilus is spiral and the last spiral envelops all the others. Its shell is divided into chambers, and by this means it fills or empties these cavities until its shell is of the same weight as the water it displaces, and so it can walk or rather move on the bottom of the sea without any exertion at all. By an ingenious arrangement of chambers, the nautilus can change its weight at will, and has used for generations and generations principles embodied but lately by man in the submarine. The argonauts and the nautilus embody many principles that are of interest to man in his study of mechanics, not the least of which is the power of siphoning themselves along the water.

A Wit's Reputation Goes to the Hospital

How They Shielded Geo. H. Ham Following an Operation From Fearful Thoughts.

NO man in Canada has the reputation of equalling Geo. H. Ham, of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., as a raconteur and a wit.

Geo. H. Ham

Mr. Ham added that he was glad that Sir Thomas had fortunately not forgotten the "et." Even in the hospital undergoing an operation for appendicitis, Mr. Ham sustained his reputation, as his best story, probably, will show.

When he lost consciousness, he says, his last thought was "This is eternity." "When I recovered from the effects of the opiate, I found myself in a darkened room, and wondered where I was and what it was all about.

"No, it isn't," she seriously responded, "but we were afraid of the shock you might get."

Mr. Geggie had officiated at a wedding ceremony, and following the refreshments, proffered his advice to the newly-wed couple on conjugal ethics.

M'Lennan A Scientist THROUGH LACK OF PULL

It Was Something Vastly Different He Would Have Been.

DURING convocation week, there were several class reunions of graduates of Toronto University.

At the reunion of the class of 1882, Dr. J. C. McLennan, one of its distinguished members, told how he happened to decide upon a university career.

His home town is Stratford, where he was born, attended the public school, entered the collegiate institute and finally passed the matriculation examination into the university.

Prof. McLennan

Stratford is a railway city. Thirty-five years ago it was one of the most important railway centres on the Grand Trunk System.

So numerous, however were the applicants for railway positions at that time, that only those with sufficient "pull" with the railway authorities were taken on.

Dr. J. C. McLennan is the type of man who does things. Had his boyhood ambition been realized, he would, no doubt, have been high up in the railway service by this time.

Chance Remarks Overheard Sent a Broken Woman to Hamilton's Man of Wondrous Charity.

JUST how far-reaching has been the Rev. Peter Philpott's divine influence over the hearts of men and women will never be known; but I recall a story that will illustrate clearly just what his life and mission in Hamilton meant.

Some years ago a young woman, weak and broken by a burden of shame being borne alone, was entering Hamilton by radial, entering it for one purpose only—to depart from it and her dark world by way of the bay.

Rev. P. W. Philpott

Dulky indifference, she sat alone, when at length a word or two caught her ear.

CENTENARY OF ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC REACHED

How Joint Examination Board Came to Be Formed

(By George J. Dyke)

It is naturally more definitely known in music circles than perhaps with the general public that examinations in music are held by music-institutions-in-theoretical and practical subjects for all pupils and students. These examinations take place in what are known as "local centres" scattered here and there throughout the British Empire, as in the case of old established music institutions of England, and with one or two music colleges at Toronto, which maintain some "centres" throughout this Dominion, apart from the examinations held in their home buildings.

Many thousands of students enter these examinations every year, and the occasions are marked with much interest by both teacher and pupil. In this city alone it is safe to say that over two hundred pupils present themselves at these events during a twelve month and quite a large number, too, it can be said. Perhaps the oldest "centre" in the West is that of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music, London, England, which has been established on the Pacific Coast almost from the starting point of Western civilization. ## BRIEF MESSAGES OF SCRIPTURE ARE RECOMMENDED

"Advertise for Evangelization" Is Advice to Christian Ministers

New York, July 15.—Newspaper advertising to further the spread of the Gospel is strongly advocated by the publicity department of the Episcopal Church, which has brought out its recommendations, after a thorough study of the question of advertising, in a pamphlet entitled "A Handbook of Church Publicity," issued under the authorization of the National Council of the church.

"No one can look at the newspapers and magazines and doubt that it pays to advertise," said the Rev. Robert F. Gibson, executive secretary of the publicity department and author of the text book. "Why should not this method of such proved efficiency be used for the propagation of the Gospel? Advertising is not necessarily sensational. It merely seems to be so because we are not accustomed to it for church purposes."

One of the striking features of the book is Mr. Gibson's strong advocacy of the fullest use by the churches of the advertising columns of the daily press not only for church notices, but for spreading the Gospel among the masses.

"We have thought of publicity in the newspapers as merely a method of giving public notice of a service or a meeting, or of making public the account of something that has taken place," says Mr. Gibson. "We have thought too much of building up the attendance at a service or of exploiting a person or a program. We are beginning to think of church publicity in the public press as evangelistic in purpose. The newspapers themselves are really far ahead of the churches in their recognition of this evangelistic opportunity. Many editors are convinced that the problems of the world will never be solved rightly until Christian principles are applied, and that therefore it is one of the functions of the public press to present and apply Christian principles."

SWEET PEA CULTIVATION AN EXPANDING INDUSTRY

The above picture is one of the groups of pictures that might be obtained of the developing industry of cultivating sweet peas for seed purposes. Roderick Mackenzie and R. Pinkney are among the pioneers of this industry within the city, as they have plantations of sweet peas. Although this industry is carried on to a considerable extent in the southern part of Vancouver Island, it is yet considered a novelty within the city limits. Those interested in the growth of sweet peas will be pleased with the results as shown by the above picture, as compared with pictures of a similar character published in The Times last Summer. Mr. Mackenzie's crop can be seen on Jackson Street, while that of Mr. Pinkney is grown on a large lot on the corner of Cook and May Streets. The above picture shows Mr. Mackenzie's garden.

ST. ANDREW'S BROTHERHOOD

Between 1,500 and 2,000 men and boys are expected to attend the international conference of Anglican and Episcopalians, which the Brotherhood of St. Andrew to take place in Seattle from August 30 to September 2. A delegation of from one to two hundred men and boys has been promised from Vancouver and district, and steps are being taken to secure as large a representation as possible from Victoria and the diocese of Columbia.

An exceptionally strong programme is being planned for the conference, including addresses of national and international repute. The gathering marks the thirty-seventh annual convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew in the United States. At the Dominion convention of the Brotherhood in Canada, held recently in Toronto, churchmen from the Eastern States attended and co-operated with the delegates from Eastern and Central Canada. The prospect of an international gathering of churchmen and boys this Summer in Seattle gives Western Canadian churchmen a unique opportunity of co-operating with their fellow-church members of the Pacific States.

A convention office has been opened at 625 Henry Building, Seattle, with Walter Macpherson in charge.

BUNYAN'S EFFIGY GETS NEW NOSE

John Bunyan has got a new nose, says the Overseas Mail.

For several years he has lain on his tomb in Bunhill-fields, E. C., a noseless effigy which has distressed hundreds of pilgrims who have come to pay him homage year by year. His nose had either been accidentally broken or had been stolen by some souvenir hunter.

But now, thanks to the good offices of the Baptist and Congregational Unions, Bunyan's ill-used effigy is once more presentable.

J. Beck, manager to H. Daniel and Co., monumental masons, of Highgate, N. who carved the nose, told a Daily Mail man that he relied upon the advice of R. H. Poynton, of Bedford, an authority on Bunyan, and also worked from an old print.

"It was a risky job, rather," he confessed, "for nobody seemed to be quite certain as to the exact shape of Bunyan's nose. It is of Portland stone, and has been very securely fixed to the effigy."

THE first round with a 40 on his first nine in the afternoon. Jim Barnes played fairly well, Bobby Jones was brilliant at times, but bad at others, while JACK HUTCHINSON ruined two fine cards with a 40 on his first morning nine and a 40 on the final afternoon nine. Par for the first nine holes, the ones that caused all the trouble, is 34.

Jack Got Off Badly. Hutchison just couldn't hit a ball on the first nine where he amassed a 42-eight over par. For example, on the sixth he hooked his tee shot into the rough, hooked his second into the rough on the side of a sand pit, tried to patch out with a niblick but sent the ball to a similar lie in another pit, put his fourth short of the up and had two putts for a six on a par four hole. The result of this was a color work with almost every club at one time or another. First the putter went wrong, then he hooked a brassie or wild approach. He pulled together on the final nine but the damage had been done.

They will play for the title to-day. In the semi-finals Suhr defeated Rogers Macveagh of Portland, 11-9, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 and Griffin won from Henry Gray also of Portland, in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2, 6-0. In the finals of the men's doubles to-day Elmer Griffin, teamed with Henry Stevens of Portland, won the doubles title from Cedric Wolford and Rogers Macveagh, both of Portland. The scores were 7-5, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5.

THE AUDIENCE. It was the night of the grand concert, and approaching the hour at which it had been advertised to begin. Bobb and Blabbs had engaged a huge hall, and expected to make a profit of many hundreds of pounds. At seven o'clock the money-takers, ticket-takers, ushers, and attendants were assembled. "Money-takers all ready!" asked Bobb. "Yes, sir!" "Ticket-takers all ready?" "Yes, sir!" "Ushers and attendants, stand by the doors!" "Right, sir!" "Now open the doors." The iron doors crashed open. Two small boys entered. "Please, mister," said a tiny voice, "can we both come in with this free pass?"—Tit-Bits.

FRANK TROEH SHOOTS IN OLD TIME FORM. Portland, July 15.—Frank Troeh, of Vancouver, Wash., won the 16 yard championship yesterday, breaking 222 out of a possible 225 targets. O. N. Ford, of Portland and Troeh tied for the title on the original event of 200 targets, each breaking 197. In the shoot off in 25 targets, Troeh shattered 25 straight while Ford missed his last bird, giving him 24 out of 25. Frank Templeton, of Portland, placed second high gun with 136 out of 200. Gus Becker, of Ogden, Utah, broke 195 out of 200. George Cooper, of Tacoma, and L. Taylor, of Seattle, each shattered 137.
